

SUMMARY

Subject matter of the dissertation: An analysis of threats to the economic security of a modern enterprise and the development of organizational and economic measures to improve it (on the example of LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz").

Author of the master's dissertation: Kugotov Islam Ruslanovich.

Scientific supervisor of the master's dissertation: candidate of economic sciences, associate professor of the department of economics, management and finance V.A. Degtyarev.

Customer organisation: LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz".

Topicality of the research. At present, the problem of economic security at the micro level is very relevant, as enterprises operate under various external and internal risks, and the competitive economic environment brings to life numerous threats. This makes it necessary to build an integrated system by the company's management aimed at raising the level of the company's economic security. Meanwhile, many theoretical issues related to the economic security of the enterprise, remain insufficiently researched, even less they get their practical implementation in the economic practice of enterprises.

Objective: to analyze the threats to economic security by the example of LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz" and to develop measures to increase it.

Tasks: to disclose the content of the main approaches to the problem of the economic security of the enterprise; describe the methodological provisions for determining the level of economic security of the enterprise; analyze the level of economic security of the enterprise; identify the main threats to economic security; to offer measures to improve the economic security of the enterprise.

Theoretical and practical significance of the research lies in the fact that its separate provisions can serve as an increment of scientific knowledge on the problem of economic security of the enterprise, and the developed recommendations contribute to the timely detection and elimination of threats to economic security of the LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz".

Results of the research. The economic security of an enterprise is defined as a state of protection of its economic interests from internal and external threats. The proposed approach to the selection of the criterion of economic security of an enterprise is based on an analysis of the financial result received by the enterprise. The study of the organizational structure of the LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz" allows us to conclude that none of its divisions specifically deals with the issues of assessing the economic security of an enterprise, analyzing its threats and identifying areas for improvement. Based on the analysis of the financial results report, it can be stated that during the study period 2014-2016 the main threat to economic security was a significant decrease in revenue and, accordingly, profit, due to lack of orders. At the same time, the analysis of the organizational structure and functions of the divisions showed that none of them specifically deals with issues related to the expansion of the portfolio of orders.

Recommendations. Establishment in the LLC Mechanization Department "SK Soyuz" commercial service, whose activities will expand the portfolio of orders, and therefore increase the revenue and profits of the enterprise, which will increase its economic security. Organization within the economic service of the financial control department, which would deal with a systematic analysis of threats to economic security and the development of measures aimed at neutralizing them.