SUMMARY

Name WRC: Management in the implementation of youth policy at the municipal level (on the example of the resort city of Pyatigorsk)

Name: Akopyan Alexey Ishkhanovich

Head: Doctor of political sciences, director of the Center of etnopolitical researches, professor of department of creative and innovative management and right Astvatsaturova Maya Artashesovna

Name of entity: Youth policy

The relevance of the research topic: State policy towards young people is an activity to create worth) socio-economic and socio-political conditions for young people. In the realities of the modern world, it is the young people who play an important role in the further democratization and modernization of Russian society. In view of this, the development of the potential of young people is a true contribution to the future of the country.

The current state youth policy of the Russian Federation, for a variety of reasons, does not yet fully contribute to the rapid socialization of the younger generation, the creation of a socially active and responsible person. Therefore, the activities of the local self-government bodies of the Russian Federation, which, due to the possession of state powers to implement social policy, solve the issues related to the development of the younger generation, its upbringing, as well as social adaptation in society, issues of protection of rights and satisfaction of the interests of the youth.

State youth policy, as a specific area of activity of legislative and executive authorities, is an element of the country's national security system, responsible for the participation of young people in socio-political and socio-economic processes. This policy is undoubtedly aimed at modernizing society, forming new social norms through the system of working with young people. The younger generation in Russia is traditionally considered a guarantor of the preservation and continuity of society, a bearer of serious potential, a resource of socio-political changes and an important part of civil society.

Youth policy is nothing more than the integration of efforts of various government bodies, public associations and citizens themselves. Municipal youth policy is the continuation of the state youth policy and a large part of the social police of supporting young people. Also, municipal authorities, when creating their local budgets in the constituent entity of the Russian Federation, are obliged develop and implement youth support initiatives. But, despite this, local authorities do not respond properly to the changing needs and requirements of young people. the system of building and methods of youth policy in the field is still uncertain. Ultimately, the implementation of state youth policy in municipalities is not very effective, there are contradictions between the stated goals and objectives for the implementation of youth policy at the regional and municipal levels with its real results.

The implementation of youth policy at various levels confronts a wide range of various problems and obstacles, in connection with which the search for effective