Summary

Subject of the research: Conceptual field «Money» and its lexical representation in German language

Author: Tsvetkov Pavel Aleksandrovich

Supervisor: Candidate of Philological Sciences, Professor, Malinin Boris Alekseevich

The supervising organization: The Chair of Germanistics and Intercultural Communication.

Topicality of research is conditioned by the methods and means of fields formation, which contribute not only to review the full range of language vocabulary in theory, but has also a direct and practical importance, for learning nonnative (foreign) language.

Objective of the research: is identification of word-formation peculiarities of the field

The tasks of the research:
1. to find an appropriate data for the research;
2. to analyze a semantic means of fields formation to consider its peculiarities;
3. to classify the material;

Theoretical significance of the proficiency paper is that it provides an extensive database of material that can become the basis for the preparation of textbooks and lecture developments in linguistics, social and political linguistics and lexicology, stylistics and syntax of the German language.

Practical significance of the proficiency paper is that its provisions can be used in courses on general linguistics, lexicology, in special courses on text linguistics and cognitive linguistics. The study of stylistic devices may be of interest for teachers of the German language for interpreting, practicing translation and annotation of texts.

The result of the research:
The analyzing and research of semantic means of conceptual field «Money» represents this conceptual framework to be common and diverse in its language.
representation. The conceptual field «Money» has a wide semantic variety in German language so that its vocabulary is to find either in form of each individual word and word combination or in a form of phraseological units.